Taking center stage on abuse:

Employee, Survivor Gives Beautiful Voice to Violence Awareness

Beauty pageant winners. They epitomize beauty, personality, and grace. They are talented. They are intelligent. They are a picture of poise under pressure.

Jenna Neth is all of these things and one more—she is a survivor of domestic violence.

That’s why Jenna, who currently reigns as Miss Siouxland, chose domestic violence awareness as her platform to share with the public. Jenna, a relief staff worker at Children’s Inn, wasn’t expecting this opportunity. She had recently competed in Miss Siouxland, a pageant with the Miss America circuit, and earned the runner-up position.

A surprising phone call late one night changed her title to Miss Siouxland when the previous winner was unable to fulfill her duties. Jenna had recently competed in Miss Siouxland, a pageant with the Miss America circuit, and earned the runner-up position.

A surprising phone call late one night changed her title to Miss Siouxland when the previous winner was unable to fulfill her duties. Jenna had recently competed in Miss Siouxland, a pageant with the Miss America circuit, and earned the runner-up position.

At one point in her life, Jenna had an abusive relationship with a boyfriend in high school. She became increasingly isolated from friends and family during the five-year relationship. In college, Jenna moved in with her boyfriend. During that time, he found ways to isolate and keep her from participating in normal college activities with other students.

After living under his abuse for years, it became too much. Jenna decided to leave him, but her escape was a harrowing experience. She chose not to get a protection order against him at that time. Looking back, she regrets that choice—and wishes she had. Because of her experience, Jenna is speaking out against the ugliness of domestic violence, and uses her voice in the pageant circuit to raise awareness of the issue.

As a survivor, Jenna wants others to know, “It’s a long road of sorting out... emotions. Victims shouldn’t feel guilty if they go back. Just stay strong once you decide to get out.”

In her opinion, the biggest challenge to overcome with domestic violence is changing the way people see themselves. If someone is being abused, helping them grow stronger makes it easier for them once they decide to step away, she shares. Jenna feels privileged for the opportunity to bring domestic abuse awareness to the national level—and show other survivors that you can overcome your past and succeed.

“I am passionate about it from working at Children’s Inn, but also as a survivor after a five-year relationship. I think it’s an issue we need more awareness on,” she says.

What are the biggest difficulties she spots working at Children’s Inn? Simply seeing that domestic violence is so prevalent—and that the numbers continue to grow as the city grows.

As a relief worker at Children’s Inn, Jenna works at many different areas of the shelter, but crisis intervention and working with the children are her favorite roles. She likes giving hope and a second chance to others. She feels most rewarded when she sees shelter guests have a good day after all the trauma they have experienced in the past.

Jenna credits some of her daily inspiration to her co-workers, “Everyone who works at Children’s Inn, even though we see a lot and deal with so much, stays positive and works together as a team.”

She is taking online classes in entrepreneurial studies to become a serial entrepreneur. Her first venture will be to open a childcare employment agency where she will match nannies to families, as well as other various childcare settings, depending on the needs of the family.

Jenna is moving on to the Miss South Dakota pageant in Hot Springs this June, and looks forward to continuing her success if she advances to Miss America.

As a runner-up to replace the winner for Miss Siouxland, her viewpoint has changed going into the next competition. Jenna knows she has to work even harder, adding, “I see it as God’s plan. I was debating continuing pageantry at all after Miss Siouxland ended. When I got the title, I felt like it was God telling me I’m not done. I need you to talk about this platform.”

With a true heart for children, Jenna is also an advocate for Children’s Miracle Network (CMN), and you can follow her on her Facebook page: Miss Siouxland 2016 Jenna Neth.

No matter the outcome of the Miss South Dakota pageant, Jenna wants to be remembered by others as someone who stayed humble, helping people who need it the most. “I want to make a difference in people’s lives,” she says bravely.

You already have, Jenna. Good luck to you in the next round of competition!
I’d like to take this time to reflect on 2015 at Children’s Inn, and what we have planned for 2016. Last year was a record year for us. We consistently had 40 to 50 people, both women and children, staying with us in the shelter each day. In addition to the needs of those staying in shelter, we also experienced an almost six percent increase in the number of crisis calls and crisis counseling sessions.

While the numbers are staggering, it’s the faces behind those numbers that tell the real story of domestic violence and child abuse and the existence of such issues in our community. Two examples of the many families we had the privilege of serving at Children’s Inn last year follow.

Karen’s husband had become increasingly abusive towards her and most recently, he pushed her out of a vehicle and then assaulted her and broke her nose. Her children witnessed everything and were terrified their mom was going to die. After he drove away, leaving them to fend for themselves, Karen walked several miles to the nearest business where the clerk offered to call police. Karen was too scared to talk to the police, but she was open to having the clerk call Children’s Inn. We arranged for a cab to bring Karen and her children to us where they would be safe.

Two sisters, Lizzie and Colette, ages three and five years old, were brought to Children’s Inn after police responded to their home due to a domestic dispute. Their mother’s boyfriend assaulted their mom and took her with him, leaving the children behind. A neighbor called police, concerned for the family.

Undoubtedly in 2016, we will serve more families like those mentioned above, as well as many others who will need our help.

- We will reach young victims of dating violence through our EMPOWER support group in the middle and high schools.
- We will have the opportunity to speak with school children about family violence and healthy relationships.
- Our parenting classes will provide families with tools and resources to better equip them to deal with the stresses of parenting.
- Our therapists will offer support and comfort to those struggling with the emotional scars of being a victim of abuse.
- Thousands of sessions of crisis counseling, both on the phone or in person, will continue to take place.

Thank you for caring not only about the work we do at Children’s Inn, but also for people like Karen, Lizzie, and Colette—and all the others who will need our help in the coming year.

Gloria Lundstrom was known for her deep Christian faith and love of children. She secured that legacy with recent bequests to Children’s Home Society (CHS), Children’s Inn, her church and other favorite charities in the community. As her niece Jan traced her life story, it became clear that Gloria’s gifts were a testament of her life experience and commitment to stewardship.

A Sioux Falls native her entire life, Gloria grew up on a small farm south of the city in the 1940s. Her mother, Hannah, was abandoned by her first husband, leaving her alone with Gloria’s older sister, Evelyn, during the Great Depression. Gloria was born much later after her mother was remarried to Oscar Lundstrom. While Gloria did not suffer the same hardships as her mother and sister, her remembrance of their haunting stories make an indelible impression on Gloria when she was a child. Jan believes these stories contributed to her decision to include CHS and Children’s Inn in her estate.

Gloria attended a small country school, graduated from Washington High School, and later studied accounting at Nettleton College. Her working years were spent at the architectural firm of Fritzel, Kroeger, Griffen and Berg and the Anderson Group Accounting Firm. She loved numbers and prided herself on being an intelligent investor, parlaying the proceeds from the sale of her childhood farm she inherited into a sizable estate.

Gloria’s fondest childhood memories were traveling with her parents to Montana, Oregon, and Washington in their Airstream trailer. She loved the mountains and had a fascination with bears—so much in fact, that she planned a significant bequest for the Sioux Falls Zoo, which used the gift to renovate the Bear exhibit in her name. Another passion, classical music, prompted Gloria to make a significant bequest to the South Dakota Symphony.

At home, Gloria led a simple life. She enjoyed quilting, collecting antiques, and playing cards. Her cats, Morris and Scamper, kept her company during her last years at Trail Ridge Retirement Center, which, coincidentally, is located within a mile of where she grew up. Gloria is home in Heaven. Grateful is CHS, Children’s Inn, and the entire Sioux Falls community for the benevolence of Gloria Lundstrom.

Law makes IRA gift provision permanent.

A direct distribution from an IRA can be a great way to provide a charitable gift. The Protecting Americans from Tax Hikes (PATH) Act of 2015 makes permanent the IRA Charitable Rollover provision that has come and gone several times over the past 10 years.

Benefits to the donor:
- Allows the donor to avoid receiving an IRA distribution as taxable income.
- May lower the donor’s income tax rate.
- The gift counts toward the Required Minimum Distribution (RMD).

Rules:
- The donor must be age 70½ or older.
- Gifts are allowed up to $100,000.
- The gift must be a direct distribution from the IRA to the charitable organization.
- The transfer generates neither taxable income nor a tax deduction.
- The gift may not be used to fund a gift annuity, charitable remainder trust, donor advised fund, or private foundation.
- You may not receive any goods or services in return for the gift.

More Please:

If we had to describe the 2016 Media One Funski in just two words, it would definitely be “More please!” With a recipe consisting of one new event, two days of perfect weather, over 450 attendees, and heaping scoops of joy, this event left everyone wanting another helping!

The 27th annual event hosted by Great Bear Ski Valley was held on January 22 and 23. The newest event garnering everyone’s attention was the fatbike race. A fatbike is an off-road bicycle with over-sized tires. The bike is designed in a way that makes it feasible to ride on soft unstable terrains. The fatbikes are often ridden on terrains like snow, sand or mud. Great Bear typically has plenty of the white, fluffy powder, making the Media One Funski the perfect place to feature this newest craze. Twenty-four riders braved the chilly morning and snowy terrain to give us an event that will definitely be making a return visit.

The two days consisted of snow tube races, jumps and tricks on skis and snowboards, kickball in the snow, and beautiful groomed trails and hills for cross country skiing and downhill events. It culminated in everyone’s favorite zipfy sled race, where a new winner was crowned, knocking out the previous three-peat champion. To everyone’s delight, the snow sculptures were constructed into fun designs and shapes, leaving visitors wondering what renditions are already being drawn up for next year.

While we anxiously anticipate the next Media One Funski, we are also incredibly pleased with the outcome of this year—$32,250 was raised for Children’s Inn!

Special thanks to our many partners and friends who helped make this perfect recipe of wintertime fun a success for all our attendees.

Better to Gift Wrap than to Receive

Who could have guessed that wrapping presents to help Children’s Inn would be such a gift? The 2015 holiday season was again the time frame for the annual Gift Wrap Booth at The Empire Mall benefiting Children’s Inn.

It’s become an annual stop for many mall customers and friends. With the opening date a week later than past years, friends still arrived in loyal fashion to support Children’s Inn. The shorter season was hardly noticed in the end, with $38,350 being raised.

An incredible 782 volunteers gave precious time during an already busy time of year—2,439 hours to be exact—to wrap over 7,500 gifts!

A handful of volunteer leaders stepped up their game by working several shifts to oversee the volunteer groups that were wrapping.

The Miracle on 41st Street toy drive was also a success, with hundreds of toys and gifts collected for Children’s Inn. These donated gifts are used for the children in shelter as birthday and Christmas gifts, as well as gifts sent with the children when they leave. Many friends made it possible to fill the sleigh at The Empire Mall and helped to brighten the day for the children served at Children’s Inn.
What do you get when you bring together 28 moms, more than 28 kids under the age of three, and hundreds of plastic Easter eggs? You get a lot of family fun in the first-ever Bright Start Easter egg hunt!

Due to the snow that blanketed the ground, the Easter egg hunt took place on March 25, just inside the Bright Start office. Kids and moms lined up before being turned loose in search of dozens of eggs waiting to be found. Little ones filled their bags with the treasures as moms stood by beaming and enjoying this special memory.

Patty Luke, Bright Start Therapist shared, “We wanted to have a gathering that would allow moms and kids to celebrate the holiday, while also getting to know other families in the program. Our moms don’t often get a chance to socialize with other young families, so it brought them together in a fun setting.”

The event concluded with the kids getting their picture taken with the Easter Bunny. Families also went home with a fully stocked Easter basket, thanks to some generous donors. The Bright Start nurses and therapist have always provided young families with support, resources, and guidance. Now, we can add smiles and chocolate to that list!
