Happy 40th Anniversary,
Children’s Inn!

The year was 1977.

We wore bell bottom pants. A gallon of gas cost 79 cents. The first Star Wars film premiered, and Atari was first released in North America. Saturday Night Fever ushered in the disco dance era. President Jimmy Carter was in the White House. Elvis Presley died at age 42.

And Children’s Inn opened its doors in Sioux Falls to victims of child abuse. Children such as Danni and Dayton...

Three-year-old Danni was small for her age. Her face was framed with blonde wisps of fly-away hair. When she came to Children’s Inn, little was known about where Danni came from. But her parents were using and dealing drugs, which resulted in their arrest.

Law enforcement found Danni and her baby brother, Dayton, in their filthy home with no food, no heat, and no one caring for them. There was no family to take Danni and Dayton, so they were brought to Children’s Inn.

This is just one story out of thousands that could be told by any staff member at Children’s Inn over the past 40 years.

Originally conceived as a shelter for children, it was less than a month before the mission expanded to include women. More often than not, women were bringing their children to our doors for safety—but they themselves had no safe place to go.

In hindsight, it seems so obvious that a place like Children’s Inn would be created. But the reality is Children’s Inn began at a time when the general public didn’t speak about what happened behind closed doors. For the most part, people minded their own business. Consequently, options available to victims of domestic violence were virtually non-existent at that time.

The very idea of opening such a place was given life thanks to the foresight, united vision, and thoughtful planning by the Siouxland Child Protection Council, the Medical Auxiliary, and other community leaders in Sioux Falls. As one of the first 10 domestic violence shelters in the entire United States, Children’s Inn opened in the fall of 1977.

1977: Two-bedroom bungalow

No one could have believed at that time what Children’s Inn would grow to be—a haven of safety and unconditional support for victims of domestic violence, and a refuge for children caught in the cross-hairs of those situations.

There would be more than 32,000 intakes into our safe shelter over the next 40 years.

The first Children’s Inn location was a two-bedroom unfurnished bungalow donated by McKennan Hospital. It had a stove, refrigerator, and a wringer washer. There were five staff and 20 volunteers.

The Director’s desk was in the basement by the furnace, and the phone in the kitchen had a long cord that would stretch into the basement to allow privacy for crisis calls. Counseling sessions were held in the bathroom.

1979: Four-bedroom on Grange Avenue

Caring community friends gradually furnished and supplied the house. After one year, the number of clients needing help quickly outgrew capacity.

Children’s Inn moved to a house on Grange Avenue in 1979. It had four bedrooms, with extra space for groups to meet. Support groups for women and children were added, and services also expanded to include a crisis phone line, drop-in counseling, parenting sessions, community referrals, and public education. Three more staff members were hired, and faithful volunteers continued their service.

Once again, consistent over-crowding precipitated a move and a capital campaign was launched in 1989 to build a new facility. Land for the new location was donated by Louis and Dorothy Hurwitz. In January of 1991, Children’s Inn moved to its current location on Western Avenue. This third home had 14 bedrooms, and more office, therapy, and play space.

An addition to Children’s Inn was completed in 2005. This expansion increased the number of bedrooms to 24. It also provided extra bathrooms, a client laundry room, and additional office, therapy, living room and storage space.
This year marks the 40th anniversary of Children’s Inn. Gone are the days of a simple lock on the front door of the Inn. There are now state-of-the-art security systems.

Gone are the days that the daily count of individuals in shelter could be counted on one hand. Today that number averages between 40–50 on any given day, but has had as many as 79.

Gone are the days that well-intentioned volunteers could provide the lion’s share of client care. Social workers, therapists, counselors, and other trained professionals are available to deal with childhood trauma, handle emotional distress, provide counseling, lead support groups, promote public education, and coordinate community networking and rural outreach.

Gone is the notion that domestic violence and child abuse shouldn’t be talked about, or that it happens in other places, but not here. “Look the other way” attitudes have changed as society has come to view abuse as unacceptable under any circumstances.

Many things have changed, but thankfully, some things are very much the same. Like knowing that everyone deserves to live a life free from violence and have a safe place to call home.

That same resolve in the hearts of the visionary founders of Children’s Inn over 40 years ago is still alive and well today in the staff, volunteers, board members, and supporters of Children’s Inn.
From the Director

Amy Carter
Operations Director

Nine years ago I was given the opportunity to become the Operations Director for Children's Inn. To know that I am part of the Children's Inn legacy is incredibly humbling and something I will always treasure.

I’m blessed to work alongside amazingly gifted women and men who have dedicated their professional careers to this work. Of the 59 employees who currently call Children's Inn their “work home,” 12 have been here 10 years or more, and two have been here over 30 years! To me, that speaks volumes about how meaningful and rewarding this work truly is.

But this work isn’t easy. It’s often exhausting—both emotionally and physically. It’s fast-paced, and it’s unknown what each day will bring. At a time when people are at their most vulnerable, experiencing the most difficult and often the most dangerous situations of their lives, they trust Children's Inn.

People walk through our doors as victims. But with our support, the help of community resources, and time to heal, they can walk out as survivors.

No one could have guessed that there would be more than 32,000 intakes into our safe shelter over 40 years. In addition, tens of thousands more individuals have been impacted through crisis intervention, counseling, parenting classes, and support groups.

As a friend of Children's Inn, we thank you for all you’ve done to make this possible. We value the partnerships, donations, encouragement, and compassion you show us and those we serve. Work like this cannot continue without a team of players, and we are so grateful you are on our team!

I’m incredibly proud as I look back at all Children’s Inn has accomplished these past four decades, and I’m very excited for what the future holds. There’s a lot yet we can do in the areas of abuse prevention, service response, and managing our growth.

Since our inception in 1977, we have kept our focus on client-centered care and empathy for those who are victims of domestic violence and child abuse. If we stay true to that course, I predict Children’s Inn will be celebrating many more landmark anniversaries!

Dedicated to excellence: Two receive awards

Carolynn Stavenger was the recipient of The Helen E. Oppold Blair Memorial Award, presented by the Sioux Empire United Way earlier this year at their annual recognition event. This award honors an individual whose work in child abuse prevention has been exemplary. Nominees come from the areas of human services, law enforcement, education, or faith-based services.

In addition to her service as a board member for Children's Home Society (which includes Children's Inn), Carolynn has been a receptionist one day each week at Children's Inn for the past 14 years. She is the first to welcome those who reach out for help in their time of crisis.

Carolynn is also a volunteer for CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocate). Carolynn assists with complex child abuse cases and works with parents, child protection workers, the courts, and attorneys.

Carolynn has devoted her life to working on behalf of those impacted by child abuse and domestic violence. Congratulations, Carolynn!

Heather Weeg received the “Employee of the Year” award for Children's Inn and Bright Start employees at Children’s Home Society’s annual Employee Appreciation Event.

Heather has been with Children’s Inn for the past 10 years, and currently serves as the Rural Outreach Coordinator. She spends time on the road serving victims of abuse in the rural areas.

Heather works hard to connect these individuals to the resources in their home communities, advocate on their behalf, and support them in their journey.

Congratulations, Heather!
“The missions of both Children's Inn and Children's Home Society have always made a whole lot of sense to both of us. Their services are needed, and we’ve always felt we wanted to support them to make sure they continue,” says Mike Pekas.

In addition to financial support, Karen rolled up her sleeves back in the mid-1970s. She recalls a time when the Medical Auxiliary talked about opening a safe place where abused and neglected children could go. Auxiliary member Bertie Van Demark sought input from Karen and asked her to enlist a few more people who might also embrace this mission.

Karen called Jean Orr and Kathy Kemp. They all met with the Auxiliary and listened to their plans. Thanks to a donation from McKennan Hospital of a two-bedroom bungalow on a nearby property, Children's Inn was born and opened its doors in 1977. Within a few weeks, they realized they needed to provide shelter for abused women as well.

The Auxiliary also took on a project to offer classes to help moms and dads learn parenting skills. Every Friday, for 11 years, Karen and Jean cared for and played with children while their parents met with counselors to attend those classes.

Karen says, “We served a lot of milk and cookies over those 11 years!”

When Bertie Van Demark retired as a board member, Karen was asked to join the board. Karen was still serving as a board member during the transition years when Children's Inn was merged as a program of Children’s Home Society (CHS) in 1998.

“The merger truly was a move that solidified the continuance of the Children's Inn mission,” says Karen.

Mike adds, “One of the great strengths of South Dakotans is the ability to see the obvious and then do what needs to be done. A good example of this was the merger of Children's Inn and Children's Home.”

Mike and Karen have provided a legacy gift to Children's Home Foundation (CHF) through a beneficiary designation from their 401K.

“This type of gift is a very simple process; as simple as completing a few forms. Typically there is no cost, and does not need to involve an attorney," says CHF Development Director Rick Weber.

Mike and Karen understand that the Foundation supports all CHS programs, so they know their gift will also support Children's Inn—a mission that has been near and dear to their hearts for 40 years.

Thank you, Karen & Mike!
Vern Eide Acura Golf Classic Raises $68,870 to Benefit Children’s Inn

The 4th Annual VERN EIDE ACURA GOLF CLASSIC took place July 10 at Willow Run Golf Course on a picture-perfect summer day. There were 29 foursomes on the course playing for hole prizes, and event champion bragging rights!

There was a lot of excitement at Hole #16 as each golfer tried to sink a hole-in-one for a new Acura. No one drove the Acura home this year, but it’s always fun to try!

A big thanks to all our sponsors, golfers, and friends of Children’s Inn.

A CONGRESSIONAL VISIT:
Thune staff tours Bright Start program

The Nurse Family Partnership (NFP) is a national program that is getting a lot of attention right now from Congress. The Bright Start program in Sioux Falls was selected recently as the site in South Dakota to host representatives from Senator John Thune’s office to learn how efficient and effective the program has been.

The Bright Start home nursing program impacts families every day. Bright Start visiting nurses spend time with young, at-risk, first-time mothers to provide the kind of information, support, and guidance that any new mom should have.

In August, two of Senator Thune’s staff spent time touring and talking with Children’s Home Society (CHS) leadership, Bright Start nurses and therapy staff, and a family that is served by the Bright Start program.

Bright Start is part of the NFP model, and the funding that supports NFP programs is currently up for reauthorization.

This was a welcomed opportunity to educate Senator Thune’s staff about what the program does, the research behind it, and how it works. They also heard first-hand accounts from Bright Start staff that are “in the trenches” doing life-changing work with families.

Kristine, a Bright Start client, shared how critical the program has been to her and her son. She expressed her gratitude for her nurse and therapist and all they have done to help her be the best parent she can be, despite the many challenges she faces.

Bright Start and CHS staff felt confident that Senator Thune’s staff left with a greater sense of the difference the NFP program has made, and continues to make in the lives of first-time moms—moms willing to learn how to give their child the best possible start in life.
